In this duo of supernatural thrillers, Calvin Bricker deals with desperate spirits right in his own neighborhood. In "The Vacant Lot," a supernatural presence beckons from an empty neighborhood property. Calvin's curiosity leads him to an aged portrait painter with a terrible secret about a dead undertaker and his missing wife, who seeks eternal release. In "How I Was Cured of Naïveté," a seemingly innocent spirit appears in the foyer of Calvin's home. When he discovers her fate, he sets her free—only to find that little girls aren't always made of sugar and spice. Snick, snick! If you like crime and mystery with a supernatural bent, succumb to the call of Desperate Spirits!
