While staying in a 17th century manor house, fifteen-year-old Molly accidentally slips through time and reappears in 1648, towards the end of the Civil War, to find she has taken the place of Molly Hampton, the eldest daughter of a Puritan family. Labelling the seventeenth century as barbaric, Molly is hell-bent on escaping back to her own life - but the manor house is now barred to her. Forced to continue with the charade, Molly meets Richard, supposedly her best friend, only to find herself falling in love with him. Gradually, Molly begins to change her mind believing that she can stay and take Molly Hampton's place - little realizing that danger and disaster lie in wait for her ...
