I stood on my toes and kissed his cheek .

That was the first time I ever touched a boy. It was wonderful. He owned my heart and I owned his. After growing up in one of the poorest parts of Brooklyn, Anna knows the moment she lays eyes on Adam that her heart—and her life—will never be the same. When he speaks, she melts. When they touch, her heart skips a beat. And when they kiss it feels like dancing in the clouds.

Now Adam is the one beside her, her rock and refuge. “I got you,” he says. And she knows, deep within her heart, that he does. Their love guides them through life. But when tragedy strikes, will it be enough for Anna? Will the love she and Adam share stay strong through the ultimate test?
