Zanna is an elven warrior princess, who seems to have it all, yet really has nothing. Her fate is not in her own hands.

Instead, it is bound to an ancient magic she has no control over.

She wants to rule the elves, yet must prove herself worthy before she is accepted. She also wants to find her mate, but after two thousand years, didn't hold much hope. Her existence has become mundane, and she craves something new. A routine assignment suddenly turns into something bigger that could ruin all of them.

Is she strong enough to save the world and find her own happiness too? Can she change and help change the fate of the world with her? Will is an orphan who has always been confused by his strangeness. He keeps himself apart, separate from those around him.

A chance meeting with a remarkable woman changes everything. He not only learns about himself, but about a whole other world that he is a part of by birthright. However the father that abandoned him as an infant stands to ruin his future and the future of the world un he can be stopped. Will and Zanna must face loved ones who work against them and their past as well as find the strength to fight a bigger enemy and save the realms from evil. Can love, friendship, family, and acceptance defeat evil before it brings the realms crashing down? Can Zanna prove herself worthy to rule the kingdom?
