Nina and Gain Decker got along just about as well as any couple possibly could but Nina was hesitant to chalk that up to the fact that her husband spanked her any time she did anything he thought was wrong like ordering a newer, bigger TV just for purposes of entertaining their friends. And she knew that when Gain walked in on her boss putting the moves on her that she should have just stayed put and diked it out with him, rather than leaving in a huff, even if he was being stubborn about it. All she'd accomplished by doing that was breaking nearly all of Gain's commandments and earning herself an awful spanking, but she just had to. She hadn't ignored signs that Dunn Plourde wanted her like that. She hadn't. Had she?
