After a twisted man and his brainwashed acolytes murder Danny's twin sister and kidnap her nephews, Danny crossed North America with her musician brother Darren pursuing those responsible – and being pursued. Now Danny fulfills her promise to her siblings, and checks herself into Rose's Place, a posh, remote drug rehabilitation facility on the east coast of Canada. Lulled by sea air and a peace and quiet she hasn't known in a long time, Danny takes up running and starts to come to terms with her losses, and imagine what her future will be. After finding a human hand on the property however, Danny's rural idyll is shattered. In the ensuing media frenzy, Danny's TV executive brother Laurence flies up from New York to be with his sister, and visit Dickie Doyle, a university friend and the founder of the rehab facility. Dickie is a broken man, having founded the rehab facility after the drug-related death of his wife. But when Danny and Laurence go to Dickie's cabin, Dickie is gone.

And a strange body is trussed up in Dickie's bed – minus a hand and a foot. Danny and Laurence race to find Dickie as the killing spree continues – and before they become the next victims.
